When an ECG has been run in the prehospital venue by a medical practitioner, EMS personnel may accept this as a valid ECG. The only reason to repeat the ECG is if the patient’s condition worsens, or if the ECG is of poor quality.

It’s important that you take the original ECG and submit it to both your service provider and to the Base Hospital.

EMS Agency uses these ECGs to review cases, in particular, False Positive and False Negative ECGs.